1/25 SHOWBOAT WITH FIGURE

TV Tommy's tire-smoking terror!

Tommy Ivo was the first to break the nine second mark in the quarter mile with a twin engine rail dragster. However, he wasn't content with being an ordinary drag racer. He wanted to be, so "TV Tommy" as he became known, added two additional engines onto his twin-engine dragster to create the "Showboat". While Tommy was never able to race the "Showboat", his demonstration runs roused crowds across the country. Kit features fully painted Tommy Ivo figure, four complete engine assemblies, and tube frame with separate body panels.

1/25 JEEP® WRANGLER RUBICON

Off-road omnipotence

The iconic Jeep has been continuously improved since its introduction with the military in World War II, keeping abreast with changing times and managing to stay relevant through the decades. Much has changed, but at its core the Jeep is the same all-terrain, go anywhere machine that carried the Allies deep into Axis territory. The Rubicon, named after the Rubicon Trail in the Sierra Nevada Range, had special features such as front and rear Dana 44 axles, Rock-Trac four-wheel drive, and special alloy wheels. Kit features easy, snap-together construction.

1/24 VW RABBIT

German genius in America

After an incredible, decades long run, the iconic VW Beetle was replaced by the VW Golf in 1974. For sales in the US, the Golf was dubbed the VW Rabbit. The vehicles' transverse-mounted 4-cylinder water-cooled engine and front wheel drive gave it unprecedented efficiency by comparison to contemporary American vehicles. Despite this, sales were slow until sharp increases in oil prices drove a commensurate spike in VW sales. Kit features a detailed 4-cylinder engine plus separate wipers and door handles.

It was top of the line, top rated and top dollar, with the Seville® ringing in at $7,401 (roughly 60 grand in today's money). Less than a thousand of these vehicles were produced, but they left an indelible mark on automotive designers. Kit features a detailed 390 c.i. engine with three two-barrel carburetors, whitewall tire inserts, textured vinyl top, plus cruise control and suspension air bags.

1/32 F-4G PHANTOM II "WILD WEASEL"

Search and destroy

Suppressing enemy air defenses is a crucial, highly demanding, and highly dangerous mission. It amounts, tactically to a deadly game of hide and seek in which hidden SAM batteries try to down lurking aircraft before they themselves are destroyed. The F-4 Phantom II was one of the most potent 'Wild Weasel' aircraft of the last several decades. These aircraft played a key role in conflicts from Vietnam to Desert Storm. Kit features access ladder, choice of two windscreen styles, wide selection of missiles including AGM-78 Standard and AGM-45 Shrike.

It is fully capable of engaging surface and aerial targets and is frequently used as a night attack fighter. Kit features detailed cockpit, optional twin tailpipes, detailed landing gear that can be modeled extended or retracted, antennas, two sidewinder missiles, and two auxiliary tanks.

Additionally, the BO 105 is exceptionally aerobatic and is the first helicopter in the world to use a hingeless rotor head. With the German Army, the BO 105 has served in the anti-tank, transport, and reconnaissance roles but here it is shown with a very special livery applied just before the type was withdrawn from its service near Roth in Bavaria. Kit features detailed interior, rotating main & tail rotors and 35 years special decal set.

1/72 CONCORDE BRITISH AIRWAYS

Here to there faster

Concorde jets are capable of blasting past the sound barrier and streaming on to Mach 2 and beyond. They fly both higher (at 60,000 feet) and faster than any other transport aircraft ever built, covering long transatlantic routes in half the time of their subsonic compatriots. Unfortunately, that speed also requires absurdly high amounts of fuel—roughly 4,800 gallons per hour of Mach 2 flight. The Concorde was retired from service in 2003 but you can build your very own! Kit features detailed cockpit, engine bays, and exhausts plus a large display stand and British Airways decals.

Le Suroit, a research vessel owned by IFREMER, was instrumental in helping discover the Titanic. This ship carried an advanced side-scanning sonar array which helped section and eliminate vast swathes of sea floor from the search. Eventually, the efforts of Le Suroit and Argo paid off. Titanic was discovered 2.2 miles beneath the surface of the waves where she had lain for 73 years. Kit features two-piece hull, detailed superstructures, all around deck railings, cranes, SAR sonar, display stand, and decals for the 1985 Titanic Expedition.

1/24 BENTLEY BLOWER

Magnificent muscle

Bentley Motors participated in the 24-hour Le Mans race from 1923 until 1930. Bentley placed first in five of those eight years and two of those five first place finishes were due to the 4.5L model Bentley. The addition of a Roots supercharger to the front of the Bentley 4.5L created the Bentley Blower. Although the addition of the supercharger lead to much acrimony within Bentley, the 'Blower' did produce an incredibly impressive 240hp. Kit features separate compressor, two-piece hood, spoked wheels, and decals for #8 from the 1930 Le Mans.

Italeri® 1/72 Macchi MC.202 Folgore

Italy's fiercest fighter

Just prior to World War II, Italian fighters had two very serious problems. They almost all used outdated radial engines and their light armament put them at a serious disadvantage in fights where every second and every bullet counted. A licensed copy of the German Daimler-Benz DB601 inverted V-12 aero engine boosted the Folgore's flight performance but its light armament of only two .50 cal (12.7mm) machine guns remained a significant drawback through the end of the war.

Italeri® 1/72 Macchi MC.205 Veltro

Beefing up the bullets

The Macchi MC.202 Folgore helped eliminate the Italian Air Forces performance shortcomings, but the Italians knew they were still not packing enough punch to bring big fighters and bombers down. Their solution was to equip a substantially redesigned MC.202 airframe with a powerful new DB 605 engine, two .50 cal (12.7 mm) machine guns and two 20mm cannons. With that much muscle behind it, the Veltro was considered by its designers to be a match for the P-51 Mustang. Unfortunately for the Italians, they simply couldn't get enough Veltros in the air. Only 262 were produced.

Italeri® 1/48 Curtiss P-40E Kittyhawk

Second string standouts

Most famous for its service with the Flying Tigers, the P-40 also served with distinction in the Pacific, Middle East, and North Africa. Everywhere it went the P-40 came up against planes that were technically more sophisticated, coming through with a combination of sheer rugged construction and good tactics. Late in the war the type would be relegated to the fighter bomber role, but its early successes in holding up the Axis war machine everywhere were its greatest feats. Kit features six sets of decals.

Join Le Grande Armee they said...

...see the world they said. Now I'm stuck on the back of this wagon, in the middle of Russia, and it's snowing! Did you hear something? Are those our horsemen... or Cossacks? The success of Napoleon is largely attributed to his military genius but little of that success could have been accomplished without the innovations to logistics that allowed his armies to move quickly and decisively through hostile territory. French supply wagons kept the armies supplied on campaigns all over Europe... but it's a long way from Paris to Moscow by wagon.

Italeri® 1/72 Napoleonic Wars Prussian Infantry

Organized, efficient, deadly

In the course of the Napoleonic Wars, Prussian line infantry greatly evolved in terms of numbers, tactics, equipment, and organization. Though they were at first badly beaten by Napoleon and reduced to a French satellite state, Prussia endured, rebuilt, and returned in force to seal Napoleon's fate at Waterloo. The ability of the Prussian line infantry to shrug off defeat and return to the fight turned Napoleon's flank and the course of history.

Italeri® 1/72 WWII German Paratroopers (Tropical)

Best of the Berlin boys

German Fallschirmjäger (paratroopers) were some of the most highly trained, best equipped, and most motivated of all German units. Despite their designation as paratroopers, after the Battle of Crete they were used almost exclusively as motorized infantry. They served in a 'fire brigade' role—rushing in to plug gaps and contain advances. Their camouflage smocks led to their being dubbed 'green devils' on Crete—a name the German's lived up to it a sequence of extraordinarily fierce engagements across Europe. Kit features forty-eight Fallschirmjäger with tropical uniforms.

Its 4-wheel drive and strong, reliable frame made it fully capable of tackling incredibly demanding trails with ease. Land Rover design was strongly influenced by the Jeep, but the Rover featured an aluminum body which was lighter and more resistant to corrosion. Kit features a 109 inch long wheel base version of the Land Rover.

Italeri® 1/48 Kfz. 305 3 ton Truck

Carrying the 'Krieg'

The aptly named Opel Blitz was the medium truck of choice for the Wehrmacht during WWII. Thousands of these trucks were produced and fielded to carry troops, supplies, and even specialized anti-aircraft mounts or wounded. Without trucks like these, the German war machine would have been mired in static combat just like WWI. The mobility, high supply capacity, and speed of these trucks made Blitzkrieg possible. By 1945, however, the Opel factory was nearly destroyed, Blitz trucks were being expended at a frantic rate, and the dwindling trucks were short of fuel.

Italeri® 1/72 Kfz. 184 Panzerjäger Elefant

Giant guns and grinding gears

Weighing as much as ten flesh and bone African Elephants, the Panzerjäger Elefant was a massive machine designed to carry one of the most lethal anti-tank guns in history. This 88mm gun fired a shell which could reliably blast through 150mm of rolled steel armor at ranges of over a mile. Though it was incredibly lethal to enemy armored vehicles, the Elefant suffered from a lack of serious anti-infantry armament and an exceedingly low top speed. From a total of 91 produced Elefant tanks, only two vehicles survived the war.

Italeri® 1/72 AS-42 Sahariana

Fast to the front

Conflict across the long, dry distances of North Africa challenged the abilities of even the most doughy generals during WWII. The difficulty of keeping such a vast area sufficiently patrolled for defense inspired the development of several specialist vehicles, including the AS-42 Sahariana. This vehicle was a topless version of the AB41 armored car with impressive off-road capabilities and side racks for water and gasoline. Speed, light armor, and a variable but generally heavy weapons load made the Sahariana a force to be reckoned with.
