In this role, she served in the Mediterranean as a fleet flagship. In 1974, Springfield was retired and scrapped. Kit features deck guns, display stand, and Terrier guided missiles.

The long and low Impala had an all new frame and a powerful 348 cubic inch engine. For folks in 1958, the Impala was a solid slice of the American dream. Sales of the Impala put Chevy back on top of the market and launched a fascination with the type that has lasted half a century. Kit features separate chrome trim pieces, opening hood and trunk, fully detailed V-8 engine with Tri-Power carbs, and soft black tires.

1/72 BRITISH INFANTRY (MODERN)
A lot to live up to

In the first and second world wars, the British Army mustered over 3 million men. Today, a much reduced force of just over 100,000 active duty soldiers guards the interests of England and the international community. This force is clearly numerically inferior, but the superiority of their training, weaponry, logistics, and cooperation with other branches of the British Military makes up for sheer lack of numbers. In recent years, the Army has fought in Afghanistan, Iraq, and the Balkans. Kit features soldiers in a variety of poses, L9A1 51mm mortar, snipers, anti-tank rocket launcher, 7.62mm machine gun, SA80 rifle.

1/72 PZ.KPFW III AUSF.L
The Panzer that went to Paris

Lightly armored, lightly armed, and in short supply, the Panzer III nevertheless prevailed against French, Polish, and Soviet forces early in WWII. Later advances would relegate the Panzer III to support roles and obsolescence, but it was the terror of the early war effort. Kit features injection-molded tracks with individual links and segments, rotating turret, 5cm gun, and decals for two versions.

The only three-engine aircraft in the Boeing inventory, the 727 was developed in the sixties to satisfy requirements for a more efficient small aircraft that had the reliability to conduct over-ocean hauls. With nearly two thousand produced, the 727 can be found in airline inventories all over the world to this day. In America, its use has slowly shrunk because of federal noise restrictions. Low bypass jet engines make the 727 one of the noisiest commercial jet airliners available today. Kit features lowered undercarriage, twin engines, display stand, and Germania decals.

Variable sweep wings allow the F-14 to cover long distances over the ocean and to function as an agile air superiority fighter. The upgraded D variant included improved avionics, a full "glass cockpit", new radar, jammers, and more. Despite the historic high quality of the F-14D, it was decided that the type should be phased out as a completely new aircraft was preferred to further upgrades of the F-14. Kit features detailed cockpit, movable variable-geometry wings, detailed undercarriage, fuel tanks; Sidewinder, Sparrow, and Phoenix guided missiles; and decals for a US Navy version.

It's 2013 in Afghanistan and the American War in Afghanistan has been raging since 2001. So far, the United States has maintained its hold on the major cities and pieces of the countryside with air power, local assistance, and "contractors". The UH-60, with its high lift and transport capacity, has given American forces the mobility they need to respond to hotspots and track down enemy bases, but the Taliban simply won't leave. In 2014, the Black Hawk changes its role from taking US soldiers to war to taking them home. Kit features movable main rotor, open/closed right side door, and US Army decals.

Over open ocean

Operating over Fortress Europe, the Ventura rapidly ran into problems. It was a big improvement over its predecessor, the Hudson, but it still suffered high casualty rates against the concentrated anti-aircraft defenses and fighters of the mainland. After losing many aircraft, the Ventura was withdrawn to coastal patrol and anti-submarine duties—tasks for which it was supremely well suited. Kit features detailed cockpit and bomb bay, four 250 and two 500 lb bombs, Boulton Paul machine gun turret, rotating prop, and decals for two RAF versions.

Virtually all of the six Type 1936 destroyers were sent to Narvik, Norway, in 1940 to secure vital iron ore supplies for Germany. Five of the six remain there to this day, just significantly lower in the water than when they arrived. After initial success, sinking Norwegian coastal vessels and landing the invasion forces, German destroyers were low on fuel and ammunition and far from home. Bottled up by the British Navy, the German ships made a good fight of it, but all were sunk. Kit features full or waterline hull, detailed guns, display stand, and detailed superstructure.

1/48 JUNKERS JU88A-10 (A-5 TROP) NORTH AFRICA

Germany's dive-bombing dynamo

Dive-bombing. Torpedo-bombing. Night fighting. The Junkers Ju 88 could do it all – and then some. Over the hot, dusty battlefields of North Africa, the A-5 tropical relied on extensive air filters to keep out sand and dirt. Rommel's Afrikakorps relied on the Ju 88 for support strikes against Allied armor and positions. The broad-winged Ju 88 could carry 3-4,000 lbs of bombs to targets at moderate range. Used effectively as part of Rommel's combined arms strategy, the Ju 88 helped Germany reverse Italian losses in North Africa and nearly carry the continent. Kit features two sets of decals.

Rocket their world

Fast, long ranged, heavily armed, and heavily armored, the P-51 turned the tide in the air against Germany. The bombers it escorted made it through, bombed accurately and rendered the Luftwaffe obsolete. So, suddenly, the Mustang had to change job descriptions. Rocket tubes slung under the wings gave the Mustang the ability to smash ground installations and vehicles. These strafing runs helped smooth the way for ground troops and shatter the infrastructure Germany needed to wage war. Kit features new rocket tube parts plus decals for two WWII aircraft.

1/720 LUTZOW HEAVY CRUISER

Packing a punch

Cruisers, by nature, are lightly armored and heavily armed, but Lutzow took that philosophy to a whole new extreme. Her main battery consisted of six 11-inch guns! She was designed to offset Germany's numerical inferiority and provide the punch the Kriegsmarine needed to knock capital ships out of the fight quickly. Despite her advantages, however, Lutzow had a very tough career indeed. Battle damage, conflicting orders, and Allied air supremacy kept Lutzow in the repair dock or port for much of her twelve year service career. Kit features full or waterline hull.

Devastation at a distance

Another of Germany's 11-inch gun armed "pocket battleships", Admiral Scheer was more spectacularly successful by far than her sister ships... though her fate remained the same. As a commerce raider, Scheer successfully sank over 100,000 tons of Allied shipping—a severe setback for the supply situation in Russia and Europe. Once Scheer returned to Germany in 1942, however, she was never free to operate in the Atlantic again. Though she made a few more sorties, the good ol' days were over. Scheer was sunk in Kiel harbor in April 1945. Kit features full or waterline hull.

Wings of the Western Front

Over a thousand overlapped, W-shaped aluminum spars made up the geodesic fuselage of the Vickers Wellington. This design, more familiar to airships than aircraft, made the aircraft much more resilient to damage than a traditional plane. Flying night runs and maritime patrols, the Wellington operated from 1936 to 1945. It was the only British bomber to serve continuously throughout WWII. Kit features decals for six versions including RAF and German versions.

1/9 NORTON MANX 500CC 1951
Classic conveyance

This glorious English manufacturer made a comeback after the Second World War. In 1949, this famous single-cylinder 500 conquered the torturous Tourist Trophy circuit to win the first world championship race in England. In 1950 and 1951, it was ridden to world championship title victory by the fearless Englishman G. Duke. Innovative for its time, it was the first bike to use an upper and lower cradle-type chassis. Kit features rubber tires and decals.

1/72 OPERATION COBRA BATTLE SET
Breakout WWII battle set

D-Day was over, but the fight to retake France was just heating up. All along Normandy's beaches a stalemate was developing as hardened German divisions ground down American forces in the dense Norman hedgerows. Operation Cobra was designed to get Americans out of the bushes and on the way to Paris. With total air superiority and heavy fire support, American armor and infantry blasted their way through the German defenders and into history. Kit features 32 German and 32 American infantry, two modular houses, a Sherman, a Panther, and German and American half-tracks.

1/35 M113 APC
Armored in aluminum

Thick aluminum armor on the M113 was sufficient for stopping the 7.62mm cartridges of the Viet Cong's preferred weapon—the AK-47. Its robust tracks and powerful engines allowed it to plow through dense underbrush. Its usual armament of a single M2 Browning .50 caliber machine gun could be augmented with a pair of M60s, allowing it to shred enemy hard points. No question, if you had to go into the bush, you wanted an M113 out front. They weren't invulnerable, but they sure beat walking. Kit features rubber tires and four decal options.

1/35 T-55 BATTLE TANK GULF WAR ANNIVERSARY
Gulf goliaths

With its high mobility, innovative armor, and powerful 100mm gun, the T-55 was one of the most advanced tanks of the post WWII period. Against the Iranians and Kuwaitis in Iraq's previous wars, the T-55 had proved formidable. However, by 1990, they were faced with overwhelming attacks from the air and the most modern tanks and weaponry the West could employ. Burnt T-55s became part of the landscape of the Gulf War along every major route of the advance. Kit features Republic of Iraq decals.

AMT® 1/48 Star Trek F-104 Starfighter
Just another UFO

For the nineteenth episode of the first season of Star Trek, a very strange event occurred. In "Tomorrow is Yesterday", Enterprise is accidentally sent back to the skies over 1968 Earth and soon intercepted by an extremely concerned F-104 Starfighter pilot. In the ensuing chaos, the F-104 is tractor beamed to bits, and multiple Air Force personnel find themselves on Enterprise. Fortunately a quick slingshot around the sun corrects things, as you might have surmised. Kit features an F-104 and bonus USS Enterprise kit.

AMT® 1/25 1964 Plymouth Belvedere Lawman Super Stock
Sweep the podium

Sales were slack on the smaller, lighter Plymouth Belvedere in the sixties age of "bigger is better", but the Plymouth Belvedere was no pipsqueak. Pack it with a 426 HEMI and it was nearly unstoppable. In fact, the 1964 Daytona race had the first, second, and third slots all occupied by drivers behind the wheels of Plymouth Belvederes. Not bad for the "little guy". Kit features a specialized Al Eckstrand "Lawman" Plymouth Belvedere.

Tamiya® 1/35 US Tank Destroyer M10 Mid Production

One shot at victory

M10s were designed to break the armored tips of Nazi Germany's Blitzkrieg attacks. They were intended as a reserve force, held back from the fighting until it was clear where the heaviest concentration of tanks was. Then, the open-turreted M10 would race forward and smash the enemy panzers with its 3-inch gun. In reality, the M10 was frequently pressed into an infantry support role when regular armor was simply unavailable. M10s were deadly to tanks, bunkers, and anti-tank guns alike. Kit features extensive details, realistic interior, T51 tracks, open/closed driver's hatch, commander, loader, gunner figures, and two decal options.

Tamiya® 1/35 German Field Maintenance Team with Equipment Set

Repaired on the road

Vehicles in the thirties and forties were unreliable. War machines under the stress of combat in WWII were outrageously unreliable. Tanks regularly broke down before they reached the battlefield and damage on the battlefield could render them inoperable but not destroyed. Armies needed sophisticated mobile workshops and dedicated maintenance crews just to keep things moving. Germany became especially adept at recovering and repairing not just their own tanks, but the Allies' tanks as well! Kit features crane, bench, drums, compressor, gas canisters, wire, chains, two figures, tool boxes, and much more!

Trumpeter 1/48 H-81A-2 AVG P-40 Variant Aircraft

Making history

When the American Volunteer Group first began planning their expedition to China, America was not officially at war with the Japanese. These volunteer pilots would be outnumbered and outgunned in a foreign land and largely cut off from any support from home. Despite this, many volunteered for the opportunity. With boom-and-zoom tactics featuring high-energy dives and sheer tenacity, the AVG managed to down nearly three hundred Japanese planes with the dated P-40.
