

Trade-up to RF7 for trouble-free performance — and get

$50 Free Merchandise

Now through
March 16, 2014

R/C forums caught fire recently when another flight sim manufacturer unveiled its latest version — and users quickly discovered it contained more bugs than a landfill mattress. But there's also good news: For a limited time, RealFlight will give those disappointed pilots $50 in free merchandise when they replace their problem software with RF7!

This offer is good now through March 16, 2014, and applies to purchases of all three RealFlight 7 editions — RF7 InterLink Elite Controller Edition (GPMZ4500), RF7 Tactic Tx-R Radio Edition (GPMZ4510), and RF7 with Transmitter Interface Edition (GPMZ4504). When owners of Phoenix or aerofly R/C flight simulators trade up to any of these, they're eligible to receive a merchandise certificate worth $50 off products from over 35 of their favorite brands.

To take advantage of the trade, modelers simply send RealFlight the original software disk from any version of the Phoenix or aerofly flight sims. The disk can be bent, folded or mutilated however necessary to fit into a handy envelope, as long as it's recognizable.

Along with the disk, the modeler must also include the original store receipt for his RF7 purchase, the proof-of-purchase from the RF7 package, and a completed Merchandise Certificate Request form. The printable form and complete offer details are available at: realflight.com/promos/trade-up/index.html.

Pilots who already own RealFlight 7 are encouraged to share the news with friends. This is another great opportunity for all pilots to enjoy popular new RF7 features like Challenges, as well as everything that has made RealFlight the enduring #1 R/C flight sim in the world!
